PREFACE

THE first catalogue of my father's books appeared in 1876 in one octavo volume. It was entirely made by him, and contained all his books under one alphabet, shortly but very clearly described. In 1888, his library having much increased, he brought out a quarto volume containing his more valuable books very fully described, and in 1890 a second volume containing his other books.

Three supplements were published to the first volume and one to the second, all bearing date 1898. These supplements, even when cut up and inserted on interleaved pages in the catalogue, rendered it rather confusing, and the additions, made by him before his death, and since by me, have made a new catalogue absolutely necessary.

I have decided to revert to the plan of his original catalogue so far as putting all the books under one alphabet is concerned, and somewhat to shorten the description of the rare books. This work has been ably carried out for me by Miss Rudd.

In the case of the rarer books I have added the words "See Descriptive Catalogue" to the entry. This must at present be taken to refer to my father's 1888 volume and its supplements, but it is my hope to bring out at some time a "hand list" of the rarer books, not taking in perhaps so many as are treated of in his Volume I, but describing them even more fully.

In conclusion, having now some insight into the great difficulty and labour of cataloguing, I must express my amazement that my father, with all his multifarious occupations, should have found time to do so great a work unaided.

ALDENHAM.
